Described as "a major talent and a deep thinker with a great ear" and "a distinctive voice in American music," composer LANSING MCLOSKEY has had his music performed in eighteen countries on six continents. He has won more than two dozen national and international awards, including the 2016 American Prize, the 2016 Robert Avalon International Composition Award, and the prestigious Lieberson Fellowship from the American Academy of Arts and Letters.

JACOB MORRIS FRIEDMAN is a composer and pianist whose work in film scoring, orchestral composition, world music and songwriting reflects his ability to cross musical borders and create a global aesthetic. Jacob has scored the music for numerous films including five feature-length documentaries for the Mysterious China Series directed by Chris Nebe and JJ Osburn and produced by Monarex Hollywood.

Jacob is on the music composition, technology and theory faculty at Hoff-Barthelson Music School.
